

Guidelines for Writing Your Study Abroad Report

General Information

The Business School would like to support its students in planning and implementing a study abroad program and inspire as many as possible to do so. Reports on experiences are very important in this context, because other students are particularly guided by them. Therefore, every student who studies at a foreign university should write a short, summarizing report upon his or her return. Support us in getting other students interested in studying abroad!

Your Report

The report should be roughly two pages long. Please briefly address the following points:

- Which foreign university did you attend? Where is it located and when did you go there?
- Did you obtain a degree?
- Which English-taught courses were available? Where there any classes you particularly enjoyed?
- How did you prepare for your study abroad year? What was the application process like?
- Did you search for accommodation on your own or where rooms in the residence halls provided?
- What were the approximate costs for your study abroad (tuition fees, living expenses)?
- What was your everyday life at the university like and what leisure activities were available?
- What were the advantages of studying abroad and what was positive about it?
- In case you had any: What were your negative experiences?
- Can you recommend anything to students planning to study abroad at your university?
- Possibly include an email address where interested parties can reach you.

Please note

The experience report is intended to help other students decide whether and which foreign university to attend. We will therefore pass it on to other students and/or upload it on our homepage. Please help us to make this great experience possible for other students.
