CALL FOR STUDENTS

TRANSBOUNDARY ENVIROMENTAL CHALLENGES: DIGITAL INCLUSION FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

Cairo - Egypt, November 12-14, 2024
at German University in Cairo (GUC)

The Technical Committee Informatics for Environmental Protection of the German Informatics Society (GI) will again award the prestigious Environmental Informatics Prize for Students. This prize has been awarded annually since 2003. for the main announcement check this Link.

HOW TO WIN?

The prize is awarded for outstanding student work in Environmental Informatics. These works may be projects undertaken as part of a course or for a degree (excluding a PhD) at an academic university or a university of applied sciences. The projects should demonstrate the contribution of informatics methods and technologies to solving environmental problems or disseminating information supporting sustainable development.

Submissions will be most successful if they demonstrate the transfer of informatics know-how to practical applications, resulting in real environmental benefits, increased environmental consciousness, or contributions to sustainable development.

The jury consists of the heads of the International Technical Committee "Informatics for Environmental Protection, Sustainable Development and Risk Management" of the German Informatics Society.
